Research Expertise

My main research interest lies in understanding the epigenetic and metabolic processes governing immune cell responses. We study these mechanisms using mouse models and patient material in the context of chromatinopathies caused by epigenetic enzyme deficiencies and gd T cell-based therapies. The aim of our research is to inform future therapeutic interventions.

Education / Training

PhD Immunology, University of Paris (former Paris 7 Denis Diderot), Paris, France, 2010

European Master of Genetics, University of Paris (former Paris 7 Denis Diderot), Paris, France, 2007

Bachelor of Science, Biotechnology, University of Warsaw, Warsaw, Poland, 2005

Appointments / Positions Held

Since 2020

Junior Group Leader, Life and Medical Sciences Institute, University of Bonn, Bonn, Germany

2018-2020

Marie Skłodowska-Curie Fellow, Life and Medical Sciences Institute, University of Bonn, Bonn, Germany

2011-2017

Visiting Fellow, National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute (NHLBI), National Institutes of Health (NIH), Bethesda, MD, USA

Honors / Awards

2018-2020

Marie Skłodowska-Curie Actions Individual Fellowship of European Commission

2015

NIH Fellows Award for Research Excellence (FARE)

2006-2007

Conseil Regional Ile-de-France Scientific Scholarship

2005-2006

Ministry of Higher Education of the Polish Government Scientific Scholarship

2005-2006

Erasmus-Socrates Scholarship of the European Commission

2003-2005

Warsaw University Scientific Scholarship
